

front

A large grid of black and white squares, likely a binary matrix or a specific type of code representation. The pattern is highly repetitive, showing vertical columns of alternating black and white squares. Within these columns, there are horizontal variations where several consecutive squares of one color are followed by a single square of the other color, creating a stepped or jagged appearance across the entire grid.